> WHERE IS THE PETRIFIED MAN?-A letter has been received from John G. Wetzel, of Carrollton, Ohio, stating and Mrs. Clark Cornwell this week. that a man from here named Briggs had related that a man seven miles from this city, three or four years ago, cursed God for letting rain fall upon his wheat, and was immediately petrified, and still remains standing in the same spot; and Mr. Wetzel wants to know if the story is true. This places us in a dilemma. We don't like to admit that we have had a man around here so wicked that he had to be petrified as an awful warning to future generations, nor that we have had one so Probably the best escape is to declare it a colossal lie, and that if Briggs lied about that, he undoubtedly lied about having come from here. This, we believe, lets us out. The man didn't curse, and wasn't petrified-or, if he did, it was somewhere else; and Briggs is a liar and never was here.

Death's Harvest.

N. M. Thompson Suddenly Called.

Our citizens were shocked, last Monday morning, by the intelligence that Mr. N. M. Thompson had been strick en down with paralysis, and was dying; and soon after it became known that his life had closed. The attack came to him without warning, Monday morning, and death occurred before noon, without conscious suffering. Mr. Thompson was born in Orange county, N. Y., and was in his 70th year at the time of his death. He came to Michigan about eighteen years ago, and about twelve years ago located in Ypsilanti, where as citizen, business man and Christian he has commanded the community. Andrew Jackson and the Veteran.

A general in the Revolutionary war, who was well known by Jackson, was postmaster of a prominent New York town. He had been an Adams man, and Silas Wright, one of the ablest representatives the state ever had, and Martin Van Buren, who was then Jack- lic inspection established rates. son's secretary of state, formed a coalition to have the veteran warrior removed soon after Jackson had taken the oath of office. The scared hero determined to see Jackson and plead his own white house. The president engaged in a familiar conversation with him, when to his amazement the old soldier said:

"Gen. Jackson. I have come here to talk to you about my office; the politicians want to take it away from me, and I have nothing else to live upon.

The president made no reply until the aged postmaster began to take off his coat in the most excited manner, when old Hickory broke out with the inquiry:

"What in heaven's name are you going to do?"

'Well, sir, I am going to show you my wounds which I received fighting for my country against the English.' "Put it on at once, sir!" was the reply. "I am astonished that a man of your age should make such an exhibition of himself," and the eyes of the iron president were suffused with tears as without another word he bade his ancient foe good evening. The next day Wright called upon the president and made out his case against the general, and urged his removal upon the strongest grounds. He had hardly finished the last sentence when Jackson sprang to his feet, flung his pipe into the fire, and exclaimed with great vehemence: "I take the consequences, sir, I take the consequences. By the eternal, I will not remove the old man. I can not remove him. Why, Mr. Wright, do you know that he carries more than a pound of British lead in his body?' That was the last of it. He who was stronger than courts or cabinets pro-nounced his fiat, and the happy old postmaster next day took the stage and returned home rejoicing.-Nashville

Wardens McGarrigle and Varnell, and Others, Indicted and Arrested in Chicago.

Great Excitement.

The investigations by the special Grand Jury called in Cook County, Illinois, has already resulted in very important movements. On Tuesday, the 15th inst., the jury which had been in session only five days found indictments against William J. McGarrigle, the Warden of the County ual conversations that are evidently in- Hospital; Harry A. All of these men except Connolly were arrested Tuesday night by deputy sheriffs, and taken to the Sheriff's office, where after the lapse of considerable time, and owing to the absence of the County Attorney, it was determined to hold them a handsome setter. "I do so love a until Wednesday. Judge Jamieson could Stocks of Both Cereals in the Country. beautiful setter. And I never had one, not name the bonds because he did not know what the charges were. Several persons were ready to go on their bonds, but nothing could be done until Wednesday so the prisoners were taken to the Sherman House where they occupied a room with the deputy sheriff.

Connolly was arrested early Wednesday follows:

William J. McGarrigle, arrested on three charges of conspiracy, $10,000 on each charge, or $30,000 in all. Edward S. McDonald, who is held on two charges, the same amount on each, or $20,000. Henry A. Varnell, who is also held on two charges, was bound in the sum of $20,000. D. O. Driscoll was held in $10,000 bonds, $5,000 on each of two charges.

James T. Connolly was held on two charges of conspiracy—$5,000 on each.

M. C. McDonald, E. H. Lehmann, and Commissioner Wren qualified and signed

It seems that the suddenness of the arrests was a great surprise to all. It was four months from March 1, and for spring not expected by the public that the jury would be so prompt or early in finding in dictments. It is believed that this action is only a beginning which well end in the indictment and arrest of many prominent County Officials including several County Commissioners and ex-Commissioners and numerous contractors as well as merchants who have done business with the County. "Boodlers" are evidently ill at ease, and Chicago will doubtless witness before the work is all done, a trial or trials that will throw completely into the shade, the re-cent "boodler" trials in New York City. There is no disguising the fact that the law and order people of Chicago and Cook county are determined to push the investigation to the bitter end.

Of those already arrested the most prominent is Warden McGarrigle. He was formerly a Republican, but changed his politics to became Chief of the Chicago lice force. Through his influence and in consequence of information obtained in Europe, the system of patrol boxes was introduced in Chicago. He was a very efficient chief and so popular that he came near being elected Sheriff of Cook county in 1882. He has been Warden of the County Hospital for a number of years, and is a man of considerable ability, Ed. McDonald, the engineer, is a brother of M. C. McDonald, who has figured in politics for a number of years in Chicago.

THE NEW RAILROAD LAW. Applied to Passenger Traffic.

As this law is one of great interest to all parties in the country, especially as effecting passenger traffic, the following opinion of one of the clearest-headed, general passenger agents of the West will be read with

The provisions of the interstate commerce bill, justly and reasonably applied to the passenger service of the United cent. of the crop, or about 122,000,000 bushels, against 107,000,000 last year and influence upon passenger revenues, its leading principles being more readily adaptable to passenger business as a latery adaptable and passenger business as a latery and 169,000,000 in March 1885, the largest surplus ever known. It is not probable that advances in passenger rates to the general public will be necessary! Whether the abolition of the discriminations which have been accorded to various classes of travelers will work serious injury to commercial business remains to be seen. If it does, the people who will be affected will, no doubt, be able to secure relief through Congress. If the abolition or restriction of the dead head rector is elected by a majority of abuse results from a reasonable application of the law there may be mourning in many places, but the general verdict will be one of approval. Take it all in all, there is little or no harm wrought to the railroads; hence the general passenger agents in the western associations are co operating to ascertain what may be the of the law, with a view to absolute observ-

Since Mrs Folsom left the cottage several days ago to attend upon what proved to be the last sickness of her mother, Mrs. Cleveland has been ensconced in her cozy suburban residence, and she was joined every evening by the President as soon as he could dispose of business. Outside of the servants connected with the establishment there is no one about the premises, and the sole guardian out of doors is an enormous were on the point of retiring, there came violent ring at the front door-bell, and for a while there was great consternation indoors. It was regarded as ominous that the dog had failed to make known the presence of a stranger, but finally one of the servants mustered up sufficient courage to answer the summons. A well-dressed man, but an utter stranger to the family, was on the vine-covered porch, and his in quiry was not for the President but for the former occupant of Oakview, whose name is Green. In explanation of his untimely visit the stranger said that he had been absent from this part of the country several years and that he did not know of the change of ownership in the place where he had formerly been a frequent guest. He was profuse in his apologies when informed of the consternation that his visit had created, and turned his steps cityward very much disappointed. effort was made to keep the matter quiet, but it finally leaked out, and the probabilities are that in the future callers at Oakview will again be compelled to run the gauntlet of the metropolitan police.

The requirements for consumption for wheat seeding, will be about 110,000,000 bushels; this would leave 85,000,000, wheat and flour, for export and for reserves at the end of the crop year; 50,000,000 bushels is the minimum to place the latter. which would imply a possible 35,000,000 bushels available for export during the ensuing four months, on this basis, by reducing the reserves to the minimum point It is possible, however, that a considerable of the seeding reserves have not been counted in the estimates of supply In any event, the statistical position does not suggest over 50,000,000 bushels available for export during the next four

The proportion of the 1886 crop of corn on hand, unmarketed and not consumed, in the twelve States mentioned, according to special investigations of the Cincinnati Price Current, is shown in the following, compared with similar calculations as to stocks a year ago: Shows in Ohio, 36 per cent.; Indiana, 35; Illinois, 37; Iowa, 26; Missouri, 25; Kansas, 30; Nebraska, 40; Minnesota, 30; Wisconsin, 24; Michigan, 30; Kentucky, 32, and Tennessee, 38 per cent., an average of 31, or 399,000,000 bus hels in the twelve States, which added to the estimated stock in other States will make 548,000,000 or 150,000 0)0 bushels less than at this time in 1886.

The March report of the Department of Agriculture of the distribution and consumption of wheat and corn shows that 36 per cent. of the crop is still in farmers' hands, a smaller proportion than in March, 1885 and 1886, but larger than in 1884. The estimated remainder is 603,000,000 bushels. The estimated proportion held for home consumption is 377,000,000 bushels, leaving 288,000,000 for transportation beyond county lines. The proportion of merchantable corn is 86 per cent., making the quality of the crop comparatively high, 80 being the average percentage merchantable in a series of years.

The proportion held for local consumption is 194,000,000 bushels, and the proportion to be shipped beyond county lines 263,000,000 bushels. The quality of the wheat growing sections, the average weight

He carried the family pocket book, while she was the family quartermaster and purchaser, held to strict account that everything should be in the proper place at the proper time, and in the proper way, but without power to purchase, or to fulfill contracts, or to provide for household wants. Will is at the head of a mechanical department, and has been receiving $45 or $50 weekly for the past ten years—a careless, good-natured fellow, who would not listen to anything for three minutes.

By chance, that afternoon, I was offered a desk and book-case for about an eighth of its value, and knowing that Dick, the head of another department, receiving $40 salary, had said that he needed one badly for work at his house, I sent for him and proposed that he should take advantage of the chance. The remaining $30 were to be the family revenue, which she was to take charge of, and with it provide for everything needed, to the best of her ability. Every Saturday night I handed her $30. When my salary was raised, I took $1 and $4 were added to the family fund. She governs and I reign. I have no responsibility for the home management. She plans everything, provides everything, and attends to every detail, large or small. I have enough of that kind of worry in managing that department of mine without having to make up yearly estimates for my household expenses, and to prepare all the different household appropriation bills. I am not qualified to interfere or meddle with her administration. I doubt if any man could do that work even if he gave delphia to secure medical treatment his whole time to it, as she does. Certainly no man can meddle without marring. The untrammeled charge of the home is her natural-born and in- ing to write about-printed 50,000 with pain and helplessness, her little alienable right as a wife, and any interference on my part would be quite as silly as her interference with one of my paper contracts. 'held in usufruct' for its members, as Herbert Spencer (echoing Thomas Jefferson) would have the land held for the living; and so are all additions to it. The only money to which I can lay claim is my $5 per week. Before marriage my wife and I had individual rights to property, and these were fused together in a joint estate with joint rights. The marriage service means something. Everybody knows this to be true where land is concerned. No one will purchase real property from a married man or married woman acting alone. Both parties must unite in the sale to give it a clear title. The same principle obtains with salary as with land. It belongs equally to both. My $5 and my wife's $2 are our individual and personal property held in fee by special grant and charter from the crown to which we owe allegiance-and it's not one of Wild Olives'. Since then I have had Will and Baldwin to lunch, and I have drawn them out on this topic. Neither had much to say. Will summed it up in one sentence: "If I don't carry the pocketbook, I am not the head of the house; and if I am not the head of the house, I might as well 'go home to my Pa.' Baldwin was briefer and more logical; "Women are condemned fools, and Dick is a crank. Don't marry."

If Dick is not a "crank," why do ninety-nine men out of every hundred carry the pocket-book? There must be some reason why he is alone in theory and practice among all my friends. What is it? Will the wives and mothers

Antiquity of Gambling. Poker was known by another name, but I doubt not that Nebuchadnezzar's army anted up in their camp in the warm Assyrian night; and while Brutus was quarreling with Cassius in his tent the Roman soldiery were staking their prospective drachmas at some game of chance. Every Man to His Trade.

DELANDEGIC Every trade, every profession, has its own peculiar methods of procedure, which, while not kept secret, are still unknown to the general public. This ignorance is due to several causes, among which may be mentioned a lack of interest and a lack of any simple account of the processes involved. If one not educated to the legal profession be told the facts in a certain case, and then be turned loose in a large law library, how long would it take him to work up a brief? How would he know what books to consult, where to find decisions bearing on the cases in question, or, when found, how to interpret them, and ascertain their exact relations to the subject in dispute?

There is probably just as much mystery surrounding the way in which the naturalist investigates the secrets of Nature, yet the true student has not the slightest desire to conceal his methods; but, on the other hand, is perfectly willing, even glad, to tell how he might at first, because his wife has arrived at his results to any one who wishes to hear. The student, on first entering a biological laboratory, thinks he has an easy task before him. All that he has to do in order to become a naturalist is to see and to remember what he sees. In a few days this confidence gives way to a spirit of despair. He begins to realize that observation is not so easy as he thought, and that the structures so distinctly shown in anatomical plates are not so readily discovered in the object before him. He becomes satisfied that in science, as revenue, in which she had with him in the other departments of knowledge, there is no royal road to learning. Gradually he acquires the methods, and knowing them his knowledge increases. What at first seemed an impossible task is seen to be really easy, and things at first invisible are soon as plain as day. At first sight it would seem difficult to take an egg, only 1-100 of an inch in diameter, and cut it into slices in any desired manner, and yet it is an everyday operation to section such an egg and convert it into fifty slices.

It is the purpose of this article to tell in general terms the way in which a naturalist, and especially a zoologist. arrives at his results. To give exact details would expand this article to a large volume and render it extremely abstruse and technical, while a mere outline will be much shorter and (the writer hopes) more interesting. Within the past few years the methods of study and tendencies of biological thought have undergone an immense development; and although each of the nearly four hundred colleges and universities in the United States pretend to give instruction in botany and zoology, there are really less than a dozen where the student can obtain a good and solid foundation in the biological sciences as they exist to-day. -Mr. J. journey. I stole from my hiding-place. Keeping well out of the candle-light that my shadow might not be thrown anywhere within his sight, I reached round to the trap-door, which rested with the slightest possible slope against the wall. A violent shake might bring it down. The jarring of the stairs under the tread of the murderer and the heavy body of his viczim might do it. So to cover my retreat, and, it might be, to horrity one whom I believed to be satject to superstitious terrors, I brought the trap down on the cavity with a thud, and in a minute, before Plowitz could have recovered himself sufficiently to get well up the dark and encumbered staircase had pulled the lever, and stood out in the quiet, well-lighted hall. Germany's Dogs of War.

One of the novel features by means of which Germany will defend herself in the "impending" war is a battalion of trained war dogs, which are now being drilled by a regiment of chasseurs at Lubben. Commenting on the value of this new fighting-or rather biting-power, the existance of which is confirmed in German military publications, the Petit Journal advises Gen. Boulanger to act on the principle of "a tooth for a tooth," and continues: "If the Germans continue the education of their dogs we ought, without delay, to enlist a regiment of cats, and the battles which these two hereditary enemies will fight will lessen the monotony of field life." Not a bad idea this, if only the Petit Journal would find a means of curing the inand if I take it with me, no one could stinct of a cat to turn tail at the sight of a dog. The following words, in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a remedy for those delicate diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women, must be of interest to every sufferer from such maladies. They are fair samples of the spontaneous expressions with which thousands give utterance to their sense of gratitude for the inestimable boon of health which has been restored to them by the use of this world-famed medicine.

JOHN E. SEGAR, of Millenbeck, Va., writes:
"My wife had been suffering for two or three years with female weakness, and had paid out one hundred dollars to physicians without relief. She took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it did her more good than all the medicine given to her by the physicians during the three years they had been practicing upon her."

Mrs. George Herger, of Westfield, N. Y., writes: "I was a great sufferer from leucorrhea, bearing-down pains, and pain continually across my back. Three bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' restored me to perfect health. I treated with Dr. —, for nine months, without receiving any benefit. Again she writes: "Having taken several bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I have regained my health wonderfully, to the astonishattending to the duties of my household. TREATING THE WRONG DISEASE.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or over-busy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged

Mrs. E. F. Morgan, of No. 71 Lexington St., East Boston, Mass., says: "Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from uterine troubles.
Having exhausted the skill of three physicians, I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and using the local treatment recommended in his 'Common Sense Medical Adviser.' I commenced to improve at once. In three months I was perfectly cured, and have had no trouble since. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send the full particulars to any one writing me for them, and enclosing a stamped-envelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and have earnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks, stating that they had commenced the use of 'Favorite Prescription,' had sent the $1.50 required for the 'Medical Adviser,' and had applied the local treatment so fully and plainly laid down therein, and were much better already."

JEALOUS

Of Crystal, Mich., writes: "I was troubled with female weakness, leucorrhea and falling of the womb for seven years, so I had to keep my bed for a good part of the time. I doctored with an army of different physicians, and spent large sums of money, but received no lasting benefit. At last my husband persuaded me to try your medicines, which I was loath to do, because I was prejudiced against them, and the doctors said they would do me no good. I finally told my husband that if he would get me some of your medicines, I would try them against the advice of my physician. He got me six bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription,' also six bottles of the 'Discovery,' for ten dollars. I took three bottles of 'Discovery' and four of 'Favorite Prescription,' and I have been a sound woman for four years. I then gave the balance of the medicine to my sister, who was troubled in the same way, and she cured herself in a short time. I have not had to take any medicine now for almost four years."

THE OUTGROWTH OF A VAST EXPERIENCE.

The treatment of many thousands of cases of those chronic weaknesses and distressing allments peculiar to females, at the Invalids Hotel and Sirgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has afforded a vast experience in nicely adapting and thoroughly testing remedies for the cure of woman's peculiar maladies.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the outgrowth, or result, of this great and valuable experience. Thousands of testimonials, received from patients and from physicians who have tested it in the more aggravated and obstinate cases which lad buffled their skill, prove if to be the most wonderful remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women. It is not recommended as a "cure-all," but as a most perfect Specific for woman's peculiar allments.

with Great Britain is more than double that of any other country; the balance of trade in our favor is more than double that of any other; and the balance per dollar is greater than in the case of any other except Sweden, whose volume is not one tenth of ours. That is a pretty good showing for a protective nation against a free-trade nation, and hardly indicates that the mother country is cutting our acquaintance to any great extent because our domestic policy is not shaped upon her model.

In Ann Arbor, a United States postoffice inspector who has been in Iowa, told a sympathetic reporter of the commercial ruin that prohibition is inflicting upon the Hawkeye state. Le Mars is running down and property worthless; Marshalltown has lost a third of her population; Waterloo, Des Moines thirty four thousand, and a four-fifths and other towns suffer in the same way: and the postal revenues have greatly fallen off. Now, we hope the Department will attend to this unfeeling inspector. He is paid out of the people's money to go about the country and do them good; but what does he do? He goes to Iowa and finds out how the people are being ruined, and discovers the cause; but does he tell them of it, so they may stop voting for prohibition and escape the ruin, repeople their towns and restore life to their business channels? Not a bit of it: this heartless wretch walks away and leaves them sinking in hopeless decay, and comes down here into Michigan and tells about it; and the deluded people of Iowa, on whom he refused-traitorously, we might almost say-to shed his light, are going blindly on still, electing prohibition legislators and making their prohibition law more stringent all unaware that they are and. thus impoverishing and ruining themselves. Certainly, this U.S. Postoffice and Barroom Inspector, who saw a man buy whisky for lubricating purposes in Chariton, Iowa, (probably because business was so poor that he couldn't afford oil,) neglected his solemn duty when he left that state without revealing to those unhappy people the cause of their woe. We call upon Mr. Vilas to stir him up to a sense of his solemn duty to the people upon whose money he lives.

WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

Anti-ani dment papers are devoting columns of space to the opinions of men that prohibition has proved a failure in Maine, Kansas and Iowa, where it has been tried; and amendment papers are devoting columns of space to counter epinions of men, that it is not a failure, but has proven in a high degree successful. The witnesses on both sides are positive, and both profess to testify from actual observation and personal knowledge. Each side claims that its evid nee is conclusive; and this a failure, but has proven in a high dethat its evid nce is conclusive; and this conflict of testimony is calculated to cause great confusion in the minds of people desiring to know what are the facts in those states, as a guide to what might be expected under like conditions in this state. If prohibition have cause great confusion in the minds of tions in this state. If prohibition have proved a fairure in those states, it would probably prove a failure here; and if it shall be found successful there. it would probably prove successful here.

Upon this determination will depend the fate of the Amendment upon which we are to vote on the 4th of April. A comparatively small part of the people would vote for it, however sad a failure they might feel sure it would be, and another comparatively small part would vote against it, however beneficent a success they might feel sure it would be: but the great mass of the voters will be guided in their action by their impression of its effect. These need not to be assured of the incalculable Frank Smith.

A Common Cold

Is often the beginning of serious affections of the Throat, Bronchial Tubes, and Lungs. Therefore, the importance of early and effective treatment cannot be overestimated. Aver's Cherry Pectoral may always be relied upon for the speedy cure of a Cold or Cough.

Last January I was attacked with a severe Cold, which, by neglect and frequent exposures, became worse, finally settling on my lungs. A terrible cough soon followed, accompanied by pains in the chest, from which I suffered intensely. After trying various remedies, without obtaining relief, I commenced taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was

ROASTED ALIVE.

Hotel, St. James Hall and Other Buildings Consumed-Loss $500,000.

Terribly Hurt.

Buffalo, N. Y., suffered a great calamity on Friday morning, the 18th inst., by a improvement might be made on the profire, the third one for the week, which burned the splendid Richmond Hotel, at the corner of Main and Eagle streets, to-Washburne, ex-United States Minister to gether with St. James Hall and other adgive any practical effect to our political jacent property. The most distressful part of the disaster is the loss of a large number of human lives. The rapidity of of Chicago, died suddenly at his place of the fire, cutting off all means of escape, led some persons to leap for life from the windows. Others got down the fire-escapes, or on Hayes ladders raised by the fire department. The shrieks and cries of the poor people in the upper stories of Ireland. I at once tell you this and make be burning structure were heartrending.

Robert Stafford, Sr., proprietor of the notel, with his wife, occupied rooms on the second floor and had a narrow escape. Terror overcame everybody, and even those who escaped in safety were in many cases prostrated by their awful experiences The estima e of the loss of life was stated pressing the riot, used sabers and bayon-ets, and a large number of people were at first to be twelve, but this is, in a measure, mere guess-work. There were 125 persons in the hotel, seventy of whom were transient guests, eight boarders and the decree permanently closing the big dis- remainder porters, bell-boys, the families of the proprietors, and clerks. Twenty-two of these were rescued from the windows by the firemen, twenty-two were taken to the hospitals, and a large number made their escape by other means. The spread of the flames is said to have been frightful in its rapidity. The elevator-shaft served as a flue for the flames and they rushed up to the top floor in a very few moments. As the guests were roused and saw the interior exits cut off they turned to the windows. They could be seen in their night-clothes, standing out clear and vivid before the lurid background of the flames. Their screams were horrible to hear, and they hotel first. The firemen did noble work and confined the fire to the narrow limits of the three buildings named. Their work of rescue had many exciting incidents. Among the guests in the hotel were about twenty insurance agents who had come on to adjust the losses of the great fire at Mil ler, Greiner & Co.'s and the Courier office on Tuesday. W. H. Alport, night clerk, says he was sitting in the office at 3:40 o'clock, when he saw a reflection on the floor. Turning round, he discovered a blaze in the coat and cloak room directly under the stairway on the main floor. The flames at once darted up the elevator-shaft with tremendous force and in an in-credibly short space of time the interior of the hotel was filled with smoke and flames. Then terrible scenes began. second and third alarms brought the entire fire department to the scene, but it was impossible to save any portion of the structure. The fire had reached the roof in less than five minutes from the time it was discovered.

Some eye-witnesses think the loss of life was largely due to the delay caused by the wires. Clinton Bidwell, of Pittsburgh, lying on an improvised cut at Dr. Hayd's office, on Niagara street, said: "Look at my I tied the sheets together and came down by them. When I was mostly down a man shot past me who had jumped He came near striking me. My God, the people lay on the roof all about me. They were groaning and dying. It was awful They died; I know they did. The skin is all off me. I made up my mind I would stick to the rope, and I did." Mann, one of the proprietors of the house, and his wife had thrilling experiences in getting out.

The Liberal Leader Discusses the Irish Situation-Re will Stand by Ircland as long as her Demands are Just. Mr. Gladstone in a speech on the night mons, in which he said there was even among its former opponents. He counseled Lord Salisbury to waken from his sleep if he wished to banish his nightmare. The Premier, however, said Gladstone, appeared determined to remain asleep. Gladstone maintained it was impossible to deal with other questions until the Irish question was cleared out of the

A word regarding what I conceive to be my obligations toward the different parties and sections we have to deal with. In starting, we are agreed that Ireland asks effective self-government in affairs exclusively Irish, subject to the unquestionable supremacy of the Imperial Parliament. Should she extend her demands beyond this limit, I frankly tell you I could no longer promote her cause. But as long as the demands she utters are just and with in bounds of moderation I will stand fast to her cause during what remains to me of political life. [heers.] It is our duty to acknowledge whatever approaches the Conservatives make toward a recognition of the real state of facts and of the prospects before us. Maj. Saunderson recently said the settlement of the Irish question must emanate from the Irish people. That statement is eminently satisfactory. It proves that even in the minds of extrem men there is a movement in the right direction. We should leave open the way for the Conservatives to pursue the right policy in this matter. I hoped they would deal liberally with Ireland, but they missed the chance when they had it. I know they receive our suggestions of assistance teach them they ought to receive our wellmeant offers to assist them against the refactory members of their party with as insults, but lessons of all great reform nationce and tolerance. Turning to the Unionists, I accent Sir George Trevelvan's desire for reunion as a proof of loyalty in his heart toward us, but I so far differ with him that if the Tories are able to settle the question satisfactorily I wish them with all my heart The present schism in our party is useful, showing that we, as a political body, are placing national and material questions above party considerations. While there is so much talk about offers and proposals of conferences, let us not conceal from ourselves the fact that this strictly is not a question of individuals, but one of nations, and when nations collide individuals are liable to be uncomfortably squeezed. [Laughter.] It is our duty to do so and say nothing that might wound or embarrass dissidents. I rejoice in the evidences of approximation among the liberal masses, and I would wish it were the same with the Liberal party. We would, however, guard against the accep-tance of formulæ which, though appearing to make an agreement, prove upon New York Tribune.

examination to be valueless. It is our great duty (and I refer especially to myelf) never to forget the importance discovering, if we can, the charges which will be in the nature of improvements in the proposals we have made. I may say my mind has been upon the subject every day since the last session. As regards the Number of Lives Lest and Scores main proposals we had in view it is futile to talk of receding. But in regard to those improvements it will be a pl ble duty to seek them. I cherish the hope that there is a variety of points on which posals we submitted to Parliament, and that these points will multiply as we draw nearer and nearer the time, probably still distant, when we can be in a condition to > views. One point which helped our defeat and caused a difficulty among our best friends was the proposal to use the imperial credit to buy out Irish landlords. Well, let me say this: I have the firmest conviction that we never proposed to risk sixpence. But that does not decide the case. My duty is to consider whether the proposal is essential to any sound plan of policy for a confession that in our proposal in behalf of the Irish landlords we went to the furthest point in their behalf, and upon two grounds, partly because we knew they had been the petted children of England, and partly because we wished to give our opponents every inducement for a great and peedy settlement of the question. I cherish the hope that it will be perfectly possible to devise a plan for the safe purchase of estates in Ireland whereby the landlord will receive perfect security with respect to the price of his property without trenching on the imperial credit; but any such plan known to me requires as a vital condition the institution of a real Irish Government able to speak and act for Ireland, without which I fail to see how to stir a step toward the adoption of such plan. [Cheers.] Finally, whilst continually considering how to improve on our plans, let us above all things be careful on no account to depart under attraction, seduction, or any phase whatever from the substance and reality of those plans. What I now look to is the touching of experience and events. I would beware of too rapid progress. What I earnestly desire is a gradual approximation, not only of the Liberal ranks, but the nation at large. We want a good stock of patience composure, and good humor, reflecting upon the solidity of the ground beneath us, from which we can not be shaken

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

Effects of the Inter-State Commerce Bill-The Demand for Money.

R. G. Dunn, in their trade review for the week, says: It is becoming more generally realized that the interstate commerce bill is for the time affecting business unfavorably. In some branches, as in the movement of dry goods to the west, a temporary flurry of greater activity results from the desire to transport before the coming change of rates. But in other trades the uncertainty as to future rates produces almost a paralysis, which is rendered more serious in the iron business by the question whether railway building and repairing may not be checked. Many vaguely look for a better understanding of the act when the commissioners are nounced, but the commissioners will have to await decisions of many courts before they can know what powers they have. Hence it can hardly be hoped that uncertainty regarding the effects of the act will be soon removed. Probably the great Baltimore and Ohio negotiations, which cause hesitation in the stock market, re sult from the passage of this act. Mr. Sully does not seem to have succeeded, but it is generally believed that some important consolidation of interests may be effected, which may have important influence on the future value of securities. Other events have rather favored prices on the whole. Eruopean purchases are of monetary pressure this spring seems less, unless it should come through determined effort of individuals, but the state of bank reserves renders such an operation entirely possible. Corn has fallen about 11/2 cents, oil has remained without important change, and lard has declined nearly 1/2 Cotton, on the contrary, has advanced to 10 cents, with large exports. An advance in wheat rates to 18 cents from Minneapolis to Chicago by the northwestern pool, instead of 71% cents, threatens to affect Chicago markets. It is now definitely settled that wool, ina growing opinion in favor of home rule, stead of advancing with foreign prices, has been forced down by the dullness in goods. Stocks on hand are ample, and here is no fear of a short clip, but growers still hold expectations of higher prices. No change is noted in woolen goods: distribution of cottons is more active as the change in freight rates draw near, but prices are only firm, and print cloths have pied seems to be some two or three years off. The bill accepting the tract of land from the citizens of Chicago who donated it for a military post passed Congress on the last day of the session. The army officers stationed at the headquaters of the division of the Missouri were rather glad to hear of its passage. In spite of the opposition it has met at times they believed that the donation would be accepted, and eventually a post would be built. General Sheridan and other leading army officers have been in favor of the post for many reasons. The first is that Chicago is one of the leading railroad centers of the country, and from it any point can be reached with the greatest speed and ease in case troops are demanded by order of the President. Next, the integral of an army in time of war in the field is a regiment, companies and battlions not being taken into consideration at such times. At present the various army posts where infantry and cavalry are stationed are numerous. and at few is there a full regiment of troops. With a large post, such as the one designed, companies can operate together as a regiment and thus do better service and receive a better drill. The question of economy is also to be considered. Chicago is one of the best markets in the world, and supplies-beef, salted meats, breadstuffs, vegetables, etc,-can be purchased here as low as at any point in the country. Chicago, from its centra! location, would, in case of a war, be one of the best points for a recruiting station from which to put the army on a war footing. These were only a few, but at the same time the most important of the points considered. The object of a post in Chicago has been under consideration for many years, but within the past three years only, has work been done towards making it a fact. - Inter Ocean A STORY OF A MEXICAN VETERAN.

An incident occurred during our occupation of the City of Mexico which made a great impression upon me, and has caused me ever since to keep a record of my movements upon every day of the year. Shortly after our en trance into the city, a robbery and murder of a particularly atrocious nature occurred. From the description given of the criminals, it was evident that one of them was a United States officer. A Mexican who had seen the malefactors leave the house they had robbed was taken through the barracks and government buildings to see if he could recognize the officer he had seen leaving the house. Heentered a room where a court-martial was in session, and at once pointed out one of its members, positively identifying him as the man he was seeking. The President of the Court was just rising to put the officer under arrest, when the door opened and another officer walked into the room. No sooner did the Mexican see him than he said, "Gentlemen, I have made a mistake. That is the man." This proved to be the case, as the officer was subsequently tried, convicted and executed for the crime. What made an especial impression upon me was the account the officer first accused gave of his feelings when the accusation was made. He kept no record of his movements, and it flashed across his mind that he could give no account whatever of where he had been or what he had been doing upon the night of the crime, and if the real criminal had not happened to appear, he would have most probably been executed upon the testimony of the Mexican.

A Boy Love Affair of Washington's.

George Washington was a tall, largelimbed, shy boy of about fifteen when bad feeling between them until 1868, he fell in love with a girl whom he seems to have met when living with his brother Augustine. He calls her, in one of his letters afterward, a "lowland beauty," and tradition makes her to have been a Miss Grimes, who later married, and was the mother of one of the young soldiers who served under Washington in the War for Independence. Whatever may have been the exact reason that his love affair did not prosper -whether he was too shy to make his mind known, or so silent ported Grant as having said unkind as not to show himself to advantage, or so discreet with grave demeanor as to hold himself too long in reserve, it the public that he could not believe is impossible now to say; but I suspect | Grant could have been correctly reporthat one effect was to make him work ted, and that Grant himself would the harder. ASOLDIER UNDER NAPOLEON

Do you see that tumble down cottage there Beyond the road by the sycamore-tree, With rags in the broken window-panes, And thorns where the flower-pots used to be? You never would think, in such a place,

The only record was his statement made to Benson J. Lossing in December, 1884, when Lossing reports as follows.

"I arrived at Philadelphia on the 21st. I agreed to stop one night and on the following morning hoist the flag over Independence Hall. In the evening there was a great crowd when I received my friends at the Continental Hotel Mr. Judd, a warm personal friend from Chicago, sent for me to come to his I went and found there Mr. Pinkerton, a skillful police detective, also from Chicago, who had been employed for some days in Baltimore watching and searching for suspicious persons there. Pinkerton informed me that a plan had been laid for my assasination, the exact time I expected to come through Baltimore being publicly known. He was well informed as to the plan, but did not know that the conspirators would have pluck enough to execute it. He urged me to go right through to Washington that night. I did not like that. I had made arrangements to visit Harrisburg and go from there to Baltimore, and had resolved to do so. * * * When I was making my way back to my room through crowds of people I met Frederick W. Mr. Lincoln and Col. Lamon entered the special car and they were soon whirling along on their way to the City of Brotherly Love.'

It is fortunate for the Nation that the solution of this question, so fraught with the gravest consequenses, among others fell upon two such men as Thomas A. Scott and Alexander K. McClure. The writer heard Mr. Lincoln say in the fall of 1864, after a protracted interview with him, and after Mr. Mc-Clure had left, that he had more brainpower than any manhehadeverknown. and everybody who knew Thomas A. Hanna of Bloomington, Ill., to ride to the Soldiers' Home, about four miles from Washington, to call upon Mr. Lincoln in the evening. Our driver missed the way, passing by the home into the forest below. Being once in the intricacies of this labyrinth we did not get out until 2 o'clock in the morning, and the question arose why the Rebels might not send a force across the river, and, coming up in the woods to the Soldiers' Home, capture Mr. Lincoln and carry him within the enemy's lines. Mr. Hanna was very much concerned in reference to the situation, and I said to him: "You go and talk with Mr. Lincoln; you are new man." The subject of his capture or assasination had been discussed until it was a sore subject between Mr. Lincoln and his friends. So the next day we got Marshal Lamon, and the three obtained an audience with the People come to see me every day and I receive them, and I do not know but that some of them are secessionists or engaged in plots to kill me. The truth is, if any man has made up his mind that he will give his life for mine he can take mine.

At the time of the assasination Lamon was, unfortunately, out of the city, and his absence occurred in this wise: Lincoln had just returned from Richmond, and, having inaugurated some steps looking toward the holding of a convention to get that State back into the Union, he asked Laman, being a a good joke, and you laugh too-out-Virginian, to go to Richmond and at- side. tend this convention. But Mr. Lincoln did go to the theatre the night of the eventful 14th and the stealthy tread of the murderer followed him. There was a pistol shot which echoed through the land, louder than the cannon's roar, and a murderous horseman dashed into the night.

A tall man, wounded, and limp, was carried to the nearest house and stretched upon his bed to die. In other mansion, and the bed should be covwords, it is the small stinging annoyances of our lives which drive us out and use us up. Into the best conditioned life, for some grand and glorious purpose, God sends the hornet.

I remarked in the first place, that these small s'inging annoyances may come in the shape of a sensitive nervous organization. People who are prostrated under typhoid fevers or of you have the finest horses and your with broken bones gets plenty of sympathy, but who pities anybody that is nervous? The doctors say, and the families say, and every body says: "Oh! she's only a little nervous;

They gather up all the varn which the gossips spin and peddle it. They gather up all the adverse criticisms about your person, about your business, about your home, about your church, and they make your ear the funnel into which they pour it. They laugh heartily when they tell you, as though it were

When I entered the ministry I looked very pale for years, and every year, for four or five years, a hundred times a year, I was asked if I was not in a consumption; and passing through the room I would sometimes hear people sigh and cry.

"A-ah! not long for this world!"

I resolved in those times that 1 never, in any conversation, would say anything depressing, and by the help of God I have kept the resolution. These people of whom I speak reap and bind in the great harvest field of discouragement. Some days you greet them with a hilarious "Good morning," Lord sent the hornet.

If the grace of God be not in the heart of housekeeper, she can not maintain her equilibrium. The men come home at night and hear the story of these annovances, and sav:

Scotch Observance of the Sabbath When two Scotch ministers advised their flocks to take advantage of any fine Sunday last autumn to get their harvest in, I thought we should hear something more about it. It seems I was right, for there has been grievous searchings of heart in the Presbyterian persuasion ever since, and last week the Auchterarder Established Presbytery, moved thereto by the Sabbath Alliance of Scotland, sat in judgment on the offenders. The result however, must be gall and wor nwood to the Sabbath Alliance. After hearing Dr. Rankin, one of the culprits who unstrung when she rushed in asking stuck manfully to his guns and avowed servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Christ to reprove Mary, and there are his readiness to act on his own precepts on the first opportunity, the presbytery declined taking action. This is all the more significant because Dr. Rankin had even poured contempt on the national observance of the Sabbath, which he describes as 'pulling down the blinds and living on cold meat, cold tea, and perhaps cold whisky." Glimpses.

Additional Press Notices. Davenport (Iowa) Daily Democrat.

GLIMPSES.—Under this modest name form, an unpretentious volume of the author tells very much of his own experiences, his own thoughts and observations. It is marked by an individuality, not in the sense of in any way making the writer prominent, but on account of its essential originality in manner as well as matter. Some 60 pages are devoted to "Army Glimpses" and describe the scenes of war times as witnessed by the writer. Some twenty of the following letters or sketches are devoted to Washington life, and they dwell upon events of national history which will not soon be forgotten. The scene then changes to the Rocky Mountains, and the reader is given picturesque "Glimpses" of some of the wonders of that region. The rest of the book is occupied by selected writings for the press covering a great number of subjects, and all are treated with poetic feeling. The author is Mr. Geo. C. Smithe, who, added to his service in the army, has the experience of a successful journalist, and one of the most readable of Washington correspondents. The work is given a local interest by the fact that Mr. Smithe was editor of the Davenport Daily Gazette in 1884.

(Ann Arbor Courier.) The sketches commence with war times, and many are the scenes depicted of the soldier boys in their weary. dreary, hard service of four years and over. Then closing up the war, many scenes in Washington are given, then glimpses of the great and mighty west, and so on. Many a pleasant hour can be spent in perusing the pages of this little book.
